C R I T I C A L P U N K R O C K

SICK OF SOCIETY are a punk rock band that has played a key role in shaping the left-wing punk scene since their formation in 1993 with their powerful sound and clear political statements. The band has always campaigned for social justice, anti-fascism and against the pathological excesses of capitalism. Their music is aggressive, fast and direct - a sound that reflects the social frustration of the last decades.

In their current releases, SICK OF SOCIETY dedicate themselves to the pressing issues of our time: escape, escape and the search for a way out of the crisis. The global political and social developments of the last few years have not only changed their perspective, but also shaped their sound. Their songs are a cry against the paralyzing hopelessness that is spreading ever further in the face of wars, environmental disasters and growing social inequality.

It is an angry rebellion against a world that is drifting ever further towards dystopia. A defiant revolt against the destructive forces of our society. It is a desperate attempt to escape the catastrophe, but ultimately it becomes the all-important question: Can this reality still be changed or is there no other way out than to escape it?

In 2025, SICK OF SOCIETY remain true to their uncompromising musical stance: the music is still fast, direct and with an unbroken anger in the belly. But the band shows a new, deeper facet of their political punk. The desperation in the face of a seemingly overwhelming opponent is palpable, as is the tireless determination not to give up. More melodic passages and more complex arrangements increase the emotional resonance and make the urgency of the topic tangible. The band uses their music to express both the frustration with the current situation and the determination to actively fight against the system of oppression!

The sound of SICK OF SOCIETY is angry, dark and at the same time frighteningly current - the perfect soundtrack for a world that is on the brink.
